During his tenure as Village Trustee, he has also served as the Council's liaison representative to the Plan Commission, Landmark Preservation Commission, the Environmental & Forestry Commission, the Northwest Municipal Conference and served as Village Pro-Tem. Andy, also served as one of the Council's Stormwater Infrastructure representatives negotiating and voting to approve key intergovernmental agreements with New Trier High School, Winnetka Park District, School District 36 and the Forest Preserves of Cook County which will substantially improve stormwater management and solve longstanding flooding issues in western Winnetka.

Andy was also instrumental in furthering the goal of preserving historically significant homes by advocating for the approval of a density bonus incentive to encourage the renovation and preservation of these homes in Winnetka. Andy worked with the Council to encourage revisions of zoning and approval processes that would streamline reviews and expand business uses in our commercial districts. Woman of the Year 2023 – Paige Dooley

Paige has been on the board of the Winnetka Historical Society since 2013 serving as an ambassador for the organization in a myriad of ways. Winnetka has been her home since 1991 and she is very familiar with North Shore history. Most of all, she is dedicated to "saving" Winnetka's historic homes through her real estate business by targeting potential buyers who appreciate the historic significance. She also connects buyers with architects who can assist them in redesigning the interiors to keep much of the historic features while providing the owners with the layouts they need. She shares the village history wherever she can! She is a true asset to our organization.

Business Leader of the Year 2023 – Wendy Serrino

As you might already know, North Shore Exchange is a place where you can find or sell designer and contemporary fashion for women and exceptional furnishings and art for your home – all at a great value. President and Founder Wendy Serrino has grown a luxury consignment store into a powerhouse non-profit organization committed to improving Chicagoland communities. Wendy has always wanted to help charities that meet the needs of low-income children, leading to raising thousands for international charities like UNICEF. In addition, Wendy is on the International Council of UNICEF and a past chair.

Using her business background, Wendy opened North Shore Exchange with a dream to offer a service where anyone could sell or donate their nicer things, generating enough profits to give back to those in need.

The biggest accomplishment of North Shore Exchange is in just ten short years, they have given over $3.2 million in grants to nonprofit agencies serving the poor. Year in and year out (even during the worst of COVID), they were able to generate those important funds to help those in need.

But the best silver lining is the people they have met along the way. Inspired by Wendy's leadership, everyone involved in shopping, consigning, donating, volunteering, or employed by North Shore Exchange has participated in their mission of giving back and helping our planet. All a labor of love, to serve the neediest in our community.

Among her other accomplishments, she is co-founder of the Glencoe Family Partnership, a group of Glencoe families that funded $500,000 for the start-up of a charter school in the blighted Englewood community. She also tirelessly served on the New Trier High School Board of Education as board member, vice-president and president.
